EXECUTE COMMANDER OF SHIP WHICH TRIED TO RAM SUBMARINE

Act of Germans Is Expected to Evoke Sharp Retaliatory Practices by the British as Brutal Violation of Law.

(By Evening Herald Leased Wire) Berlin, July 28, via wireless telegraph—Captain Charles Fryatt, master of the British steamship Braunschweig, which was captured by German destroyers last month and taken into Zeebrugge, has been sentenced by shooting after trial before a German naval court martial. The death sentence was passed upon Captain Fryatt because of his alleged attempt in attempting to ram his ship into a German submarine.

PROBABLY WILL CALL OUT RETALIATORY MEASURES

Washington, July 28.—Germans expect of Captain Charles Fryatt master of the British steamship Braunschweig, for an alleged attempt to ram a submarine here as a brutal violation of international law, likely to result in prompt retaliatory measures by Great Britain. They contend that if a lone submarine approached the Braunschweig it was in effect an attack and Captain Fryatt in making a counter-attack by attempting to ram subjected himself only to treatment as a prisoner of war in event of capture.

Retaliatory to the effect it is feared might be followed by a change in the German submarine policy, which has been satisfactory to the United States since the last assurance that merchant ships would not be attacked without warning or provision for safety of passengers and crews.

Convention number ten of the second Hague peace conference sets forth how the crews of mercantilemen who legitimately resist capture should be treated as part of the armed force of an enemy. One of the best authorities on the subject says:

"In a sense the crews of merchantmen owned by subjects of the belligerent nations to the latter's armament. For those vessels are liable to be seized by enemy men of war or attacked for that purpose, they may defend themselves during the attack and seize the attacking men of war. The crews of merchantmen become in such cases combatants and enjoy all the privileges of the members of armed forces. If unmercantile ships are attacked they must not commence hostilities and if they do—then they are liable to be treated as combatants but as private individuals who commit hostilities in hostilities."

Officials here point out that the United States has taken the position that the master of any merchant vessel who sees a submarine approaching him has from the very nature of the submarine method of capture the right to presume that he is about to be attacked. Consequently it is agreed he has the right at least to repel that attack in self-defense.

Charges grew out of the trial of Mrs. Matters and Margaret Ryan, a Canadian girl to the motherhood of "Baby Irene," whom the former produced as an heir to the estate of her late husband.
